The provinces are practically autonomous, and although they might conceivably units in an effort to overthrow the GOLD MEDALS SELVER MEDALS present dynasty, when that was accomplished they would not hang together for any projects of conquest, unless in the impossible circumstances of each province being able clearly to foresee what its own gain was to be. In connection with the present crisis it is alleged that it would be unsafe to send Anhui soldiers into Hunan, because that would be the beginning of civil war, since [339] the Hunanese, it is supposed, would resent the intrusion of troops from another province as warmly as they would the incursion of a foreign fee. The Chinese, in fact, speak of the natives of other provinces than their own as foreigners, and at the time of the hostilities with France, when Chinese ships of war were seeking refuge from their pursuers, they were not received with any cordiality in ports which conceived they had nothing to do with the affair. With this want of sympathy between the provinces-[1874] which in fact is one of the chief reasons of the Manchus having been able, in spite of their unpopularity, to continue their rule so long-there is absolutely no prespect of China ever becoming a conquering power. The idee, although it has already been pretty will explaited for all it is worth, still has a touch of sensationalism about it which will probably ensure its revival in the home press from time to time, but it rests on no basis of probability or reasonable knowledge of the race.
